South Texan Staff

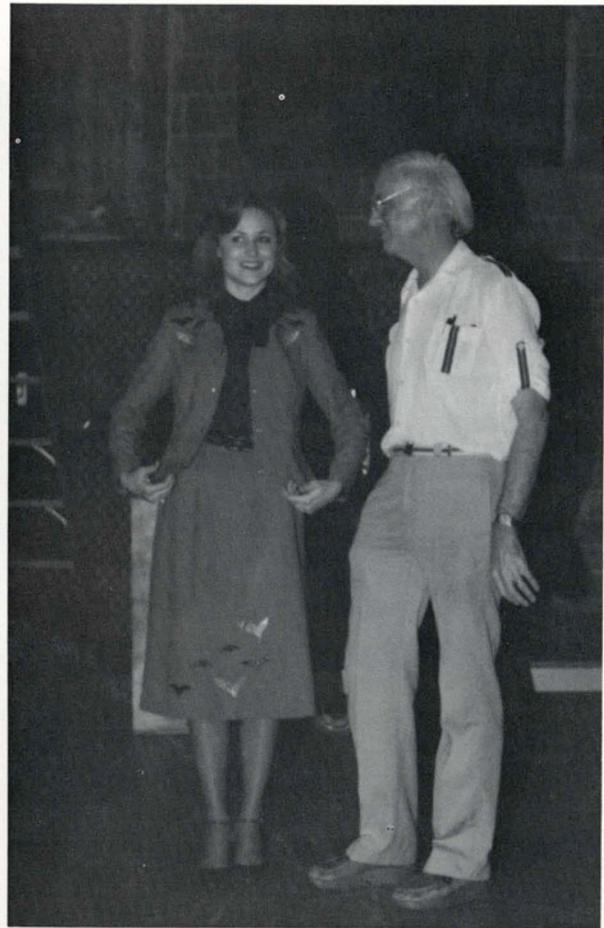

Advisor: Dr. George Steinmeyer

This year the yearbook and newspaper staff acquired a new advisor. Dr. George Steinmeyer has worked hard and successfully to come out with better products. In the past he was a newspaper man himself, and he has recently learned and dealt with the yearbook work very well.

The newspaper, The South Texan, is produced weekly by a student staff throughout the school year. This year's staff includes: August Smith, Velma Chavez, Olaya Rodriguez (Editor), Delma Saenz, Monna Carpenter, (back) Phillip Evripidou, Linda Gonzalez, Jane Kieschnick, and Alice Henke. The students can pick up the paper every Friday which is distributed around the campus. The paper covers current events in and around the university.

The yearbook, El Rancho, is also produced by students. This year the staff had six members. The Editor, Michelle Crislip, took care of the color section, the activities, the group section and the closing. Pictured for the whole book were taken by Daniel Richardson and Peter Gonzalez. Vilma Garza worked on two sections; Faculty and Administration, and Colleges. Lupita Villarea and Selma Garcia each did one section. Lupita worked on Sports and Selma did the Classes. This year's yearbook was finished in June and distributed in September.

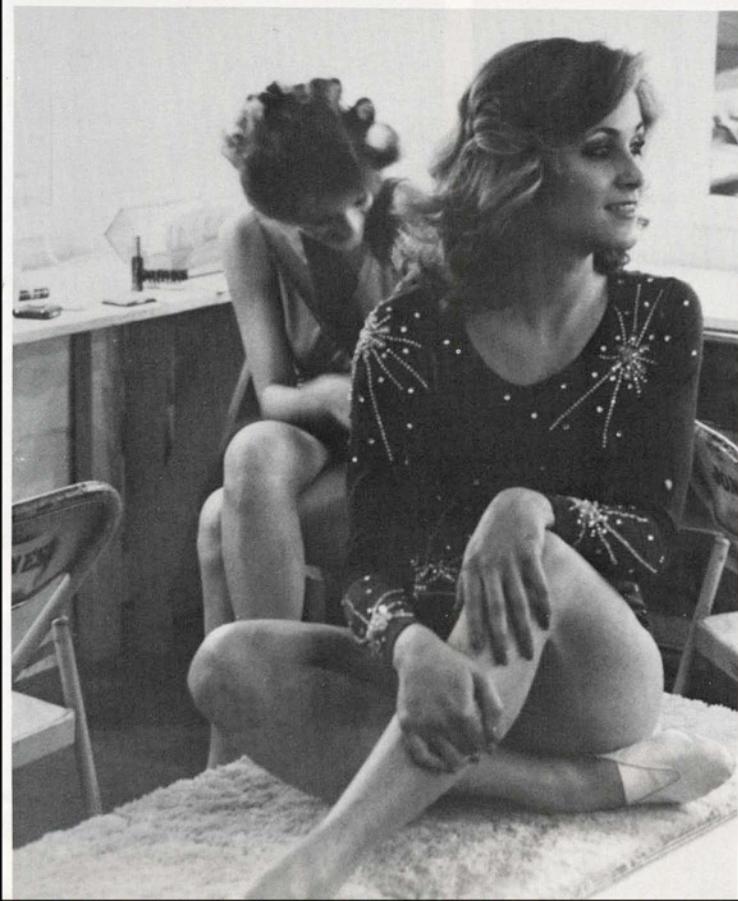

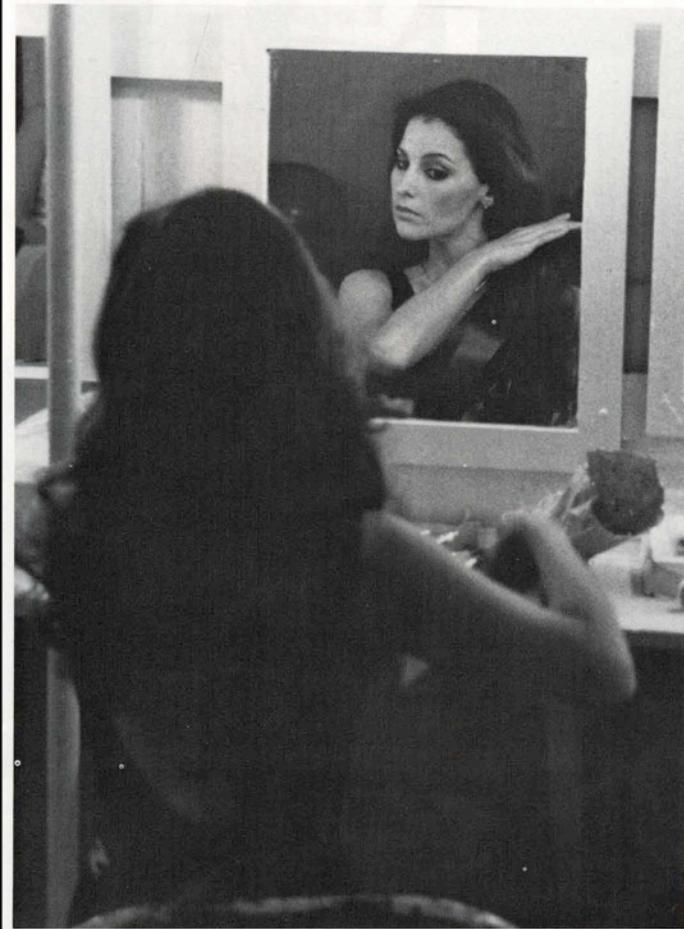

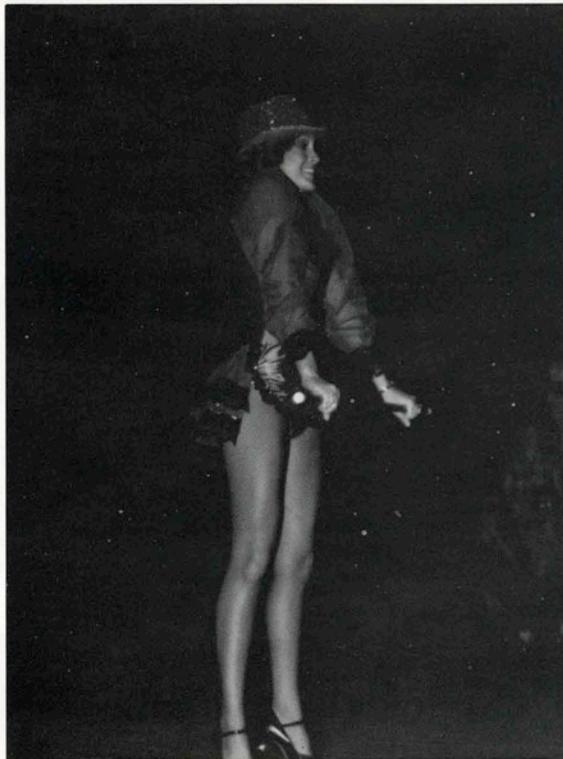

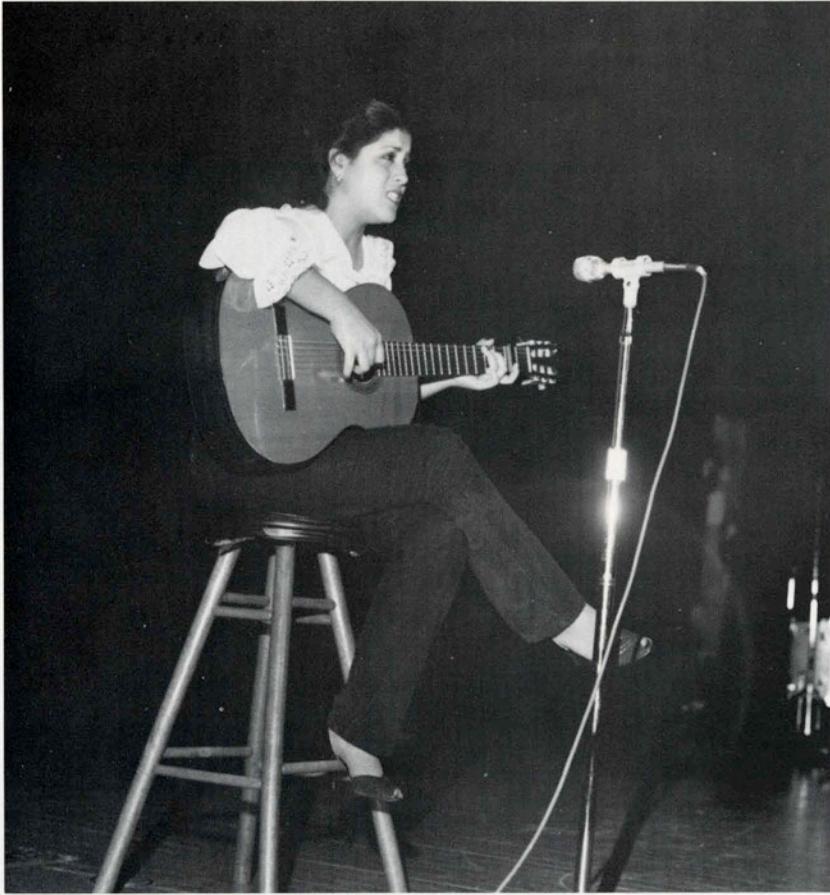

Miss A&I

The Miss Texas A&I pageant was held on February 18, 1962 in the Jones Auditorium. The Chairman was Carol Alexander and the Production Director, Dr. Robert H. Scott. The special guest of the evening was Miss Texas, Sheri Ryman.

Miss Texas A&I received a $250 scholarship from the Alumni Association along with $200 wardrobe allowance for the state finals. Her travel to Ft. Worth for the Miss Texas Pageant was also provided. Above: The ten contestants were (front) Pam Hees, Christy McCoslin, Tammy Rhodes, Cynthia Garcia, Terri Gulsby, (back) Julie Underbrink, Anna Uriegas, Caroline Gonzalez, Sara Slate, and Sara Morones. Above right: Miss Texas and Dr. Scott backstage. Right: The contestants during dress rehearsal. Opposite page, top left: Caroline preparing in the dressing room. Top right: The A&I Singers perform during the pageant. Bottom left: Sheri preparing for her routine. Bottom right: Last minute preparation in the dressing room.

The College of Agriculture is dedicated to the education and training of students for careers in agricultural sciences, production and industry. In addition to agricultural sciences, students take courses in the arts, basic sciences, and other supporting fields. Degree programs are designed for specialization with a major or minor in one of the five fields and their respective options. The options provide flexibility in designing a student's individual degree plan within the major. From the three basic disciplines: production, agricultural industries, and science. Those students interested in an agricultural industries emphasis should consider courses in agricultural economics and business in lieu of electives. Those students desiring to continue for advanced degrees should consider the science option and take additional courses in chemistry, mathematics, physics, and statistics in lieu of electives.

The College of Agriculture has recognized the importance of an effective advisory program for undergraduate students. Students should seek counseling from professors in their major. The College of Agriculture faculty counsels students as needed in courses, goals, opportunities and personal problems.

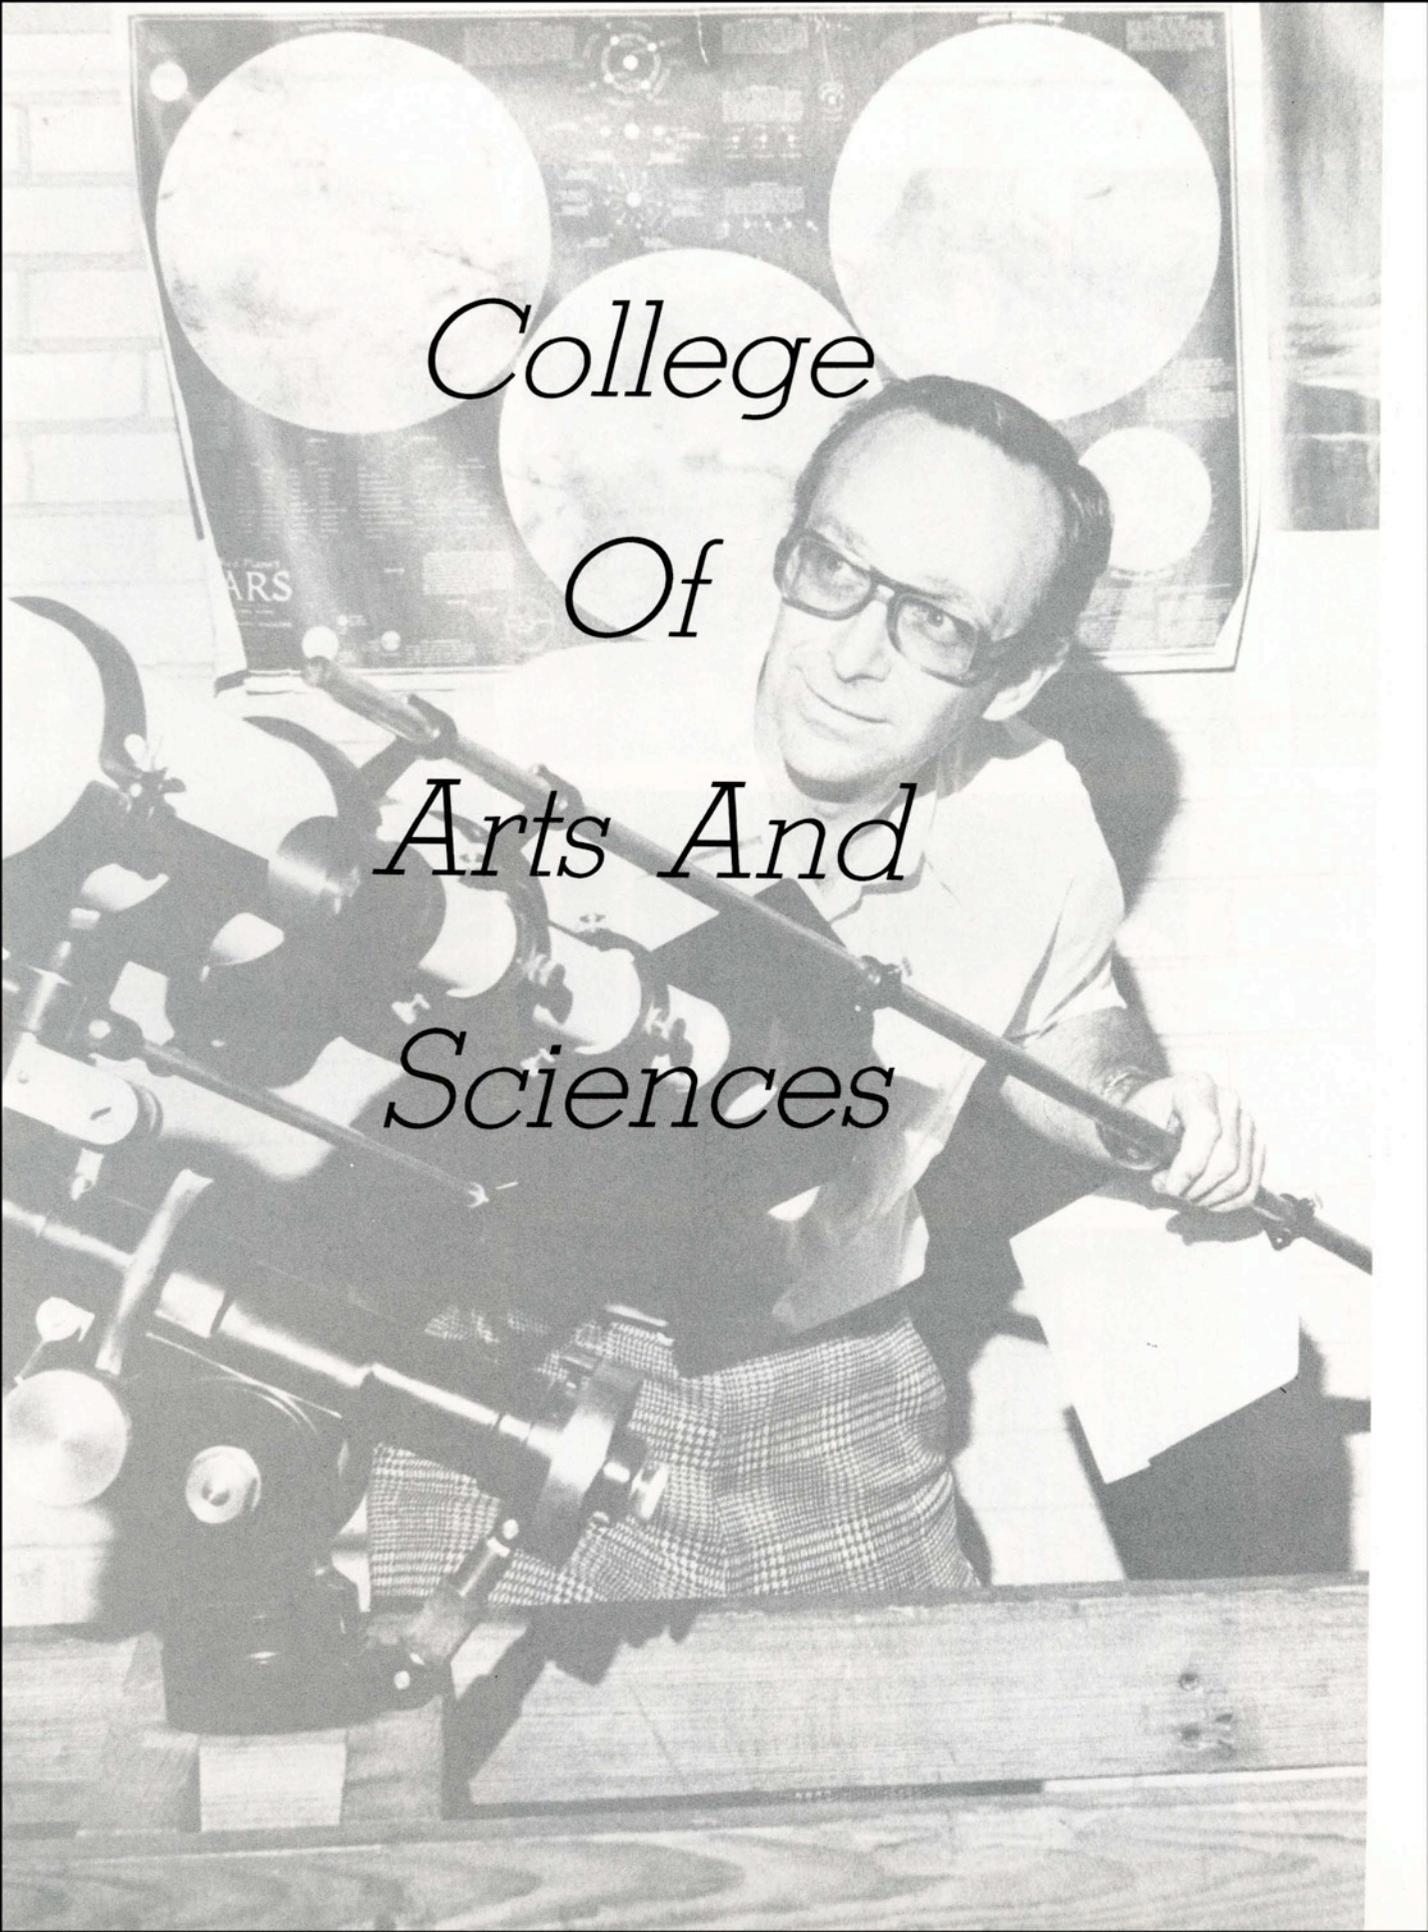

These degree programs assist in the training of graduates for positions of leadership in agriculture and related enterprises. Employment opportunities are available in industrial agriculture, farming and ranching, soil and water conservation and management, ranch and farm management, county and state extension work, federal agencies, livestock breed associations, agricultural machinery and construction enterprises, research, and game management, to name a few. Agricultural graduates' responsibilities to society include the production, economic and marketing aspects of food, fiber and shelter for our rapidly expanding populations.

The College of Arts and Sciences performs two major functions for the institution. One is to provide approximately forty to sixty percent of the courses required of students majoring in other colleges of the University. Courses in arts and sciences afford the breadth of intellectual development needed as a foundation for specialized training in the Colleges of Agriculture, Business Administration, Engineering, and Teacher Education. Such courses not only build a foundation for efficient specialization but also analyze the important social, economic, and political relationships of human beings, an understanding of which prepares the student for more intelligent citizenship. In administering the required work in arts and sciences, the College recognizes its obligation to aid the other Colleges by helping to extend the intellectual horizons of their students.

The other major function of the College of Arts and Sciences is to provide four years of work, at the undergraduate level, leading to the traditional bachelor's degree. At present, the College offers the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Fine Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Music.

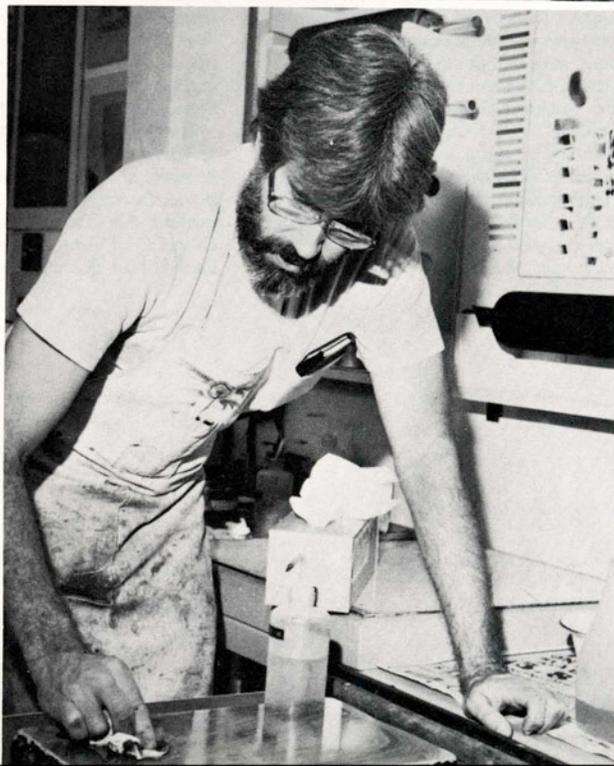

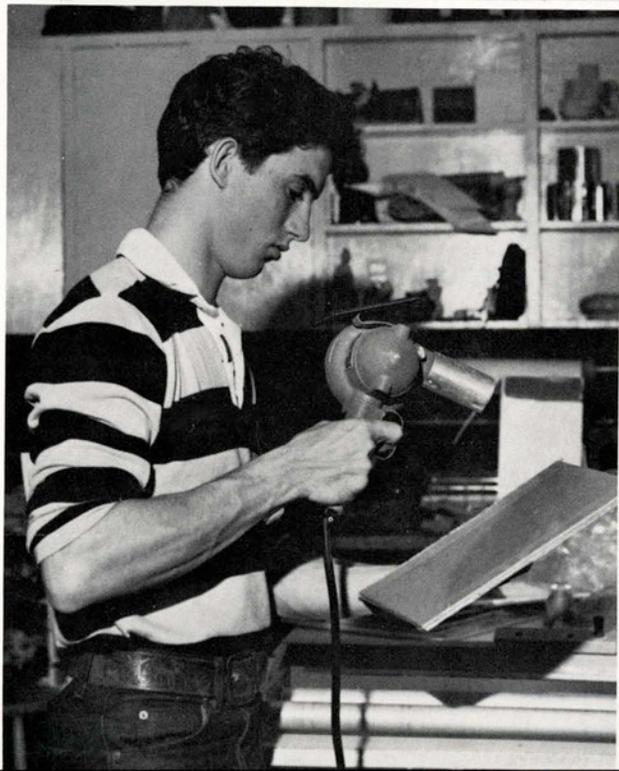

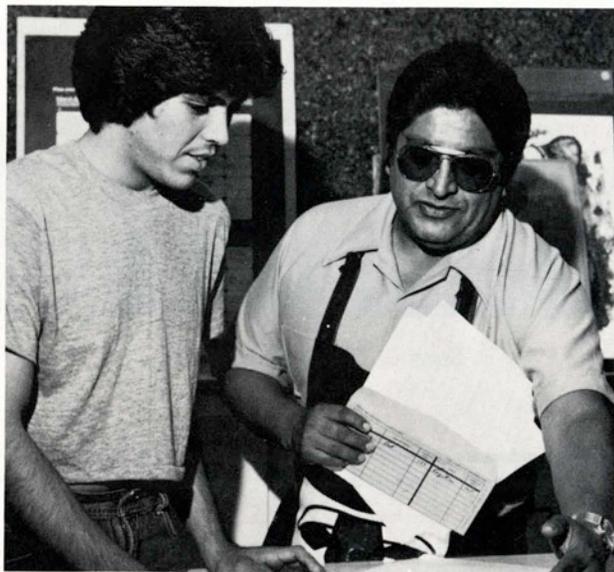

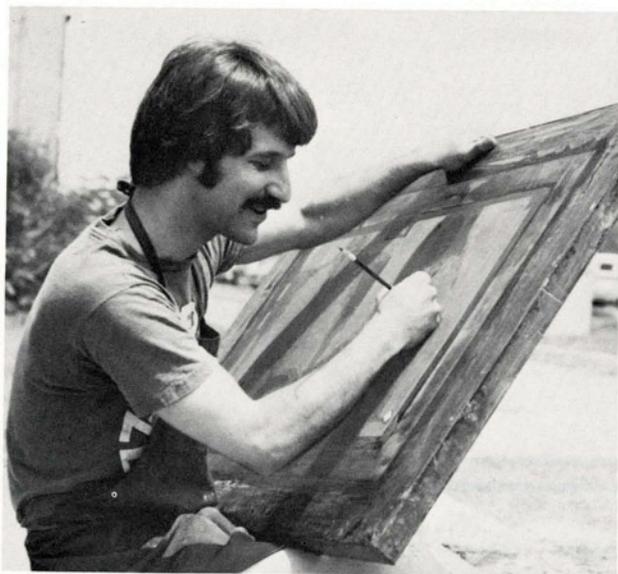

Through such offerings, the College provides students the opportunity of gaining that education necessary for personal enrichment and for effective social adjustment. These curricula do not neglect the preparation necessary for making a living, but they give great emphasis also in making a richer life. To this end, the students majoring in Arts and Sciences normally specialize in the subjects offered in one of its component departments, but the degrees are primarily planned to insure well-balanced training in all of the humanities, sciences and social sciences.

Department Of Art

The art department also has facilities for welding and casting of metal, a ceramic studio, a studio for advertising design, two drawing studios and a large gallery.

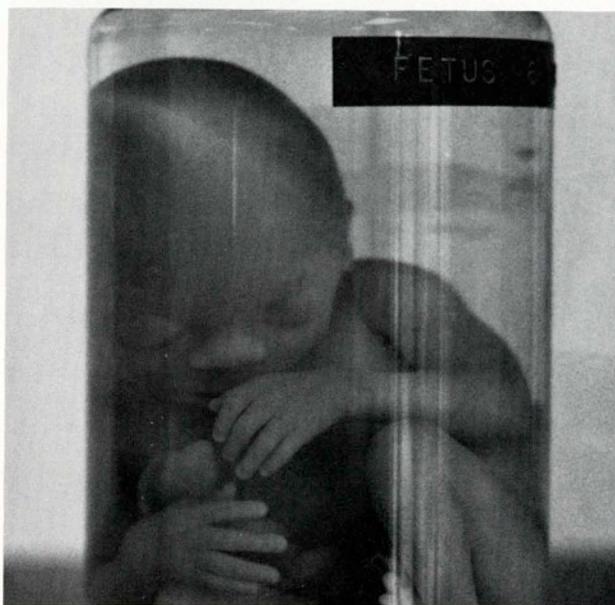

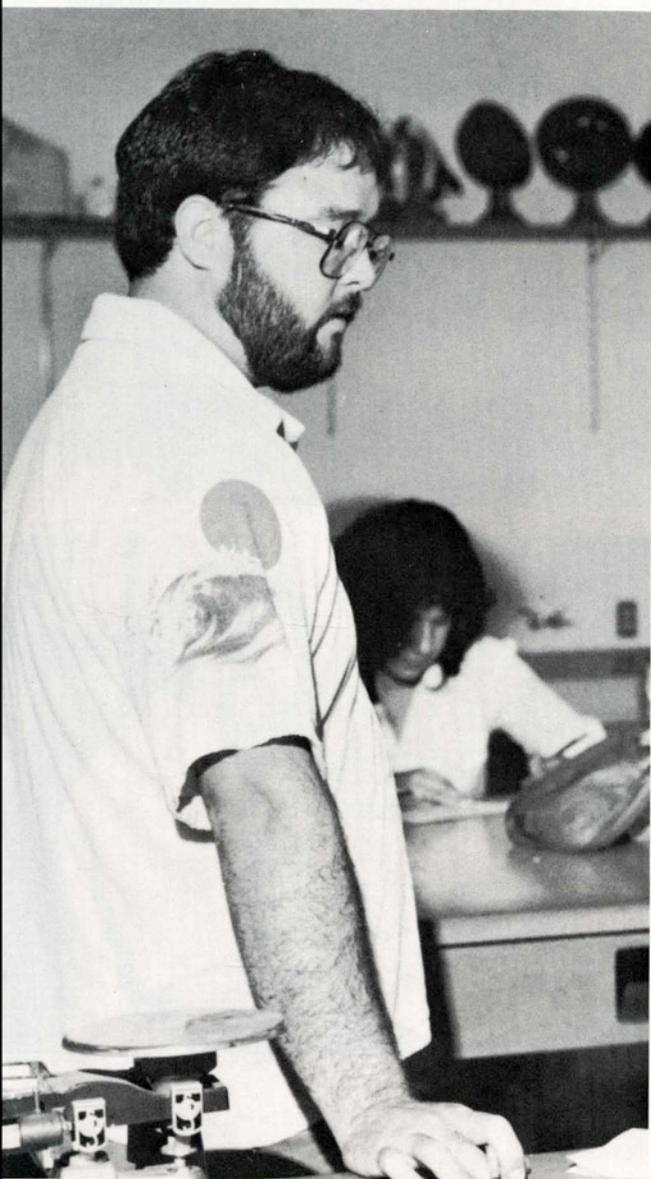

Department Of Biology

Biology is defined as the science of life of living matter in all its forms and phenomena. At Texas A&I the biology department offers courses from freshman level general biology to senior and graduate courses offered for masters degree work.

Department Of English

The English Department provides opportunity for all students to further develop their English skills. Courses offered pertain to the study of grammar and usage, skills for writing and reading comprehension, analysis of essays, and the study of U.S. literature and world literature.

In keeping with the overall objectives of the University, offerings in geography and geology are more specifically planned to meet the needs of: those wishing an introduction to geography or desiring to major in or minor in geography for cultural purposes; those who plan training toward a career in geographic teaching and research; those who plan a career in geography with future service in governmental, military, or private organizations or plan to further their training for higher degrees; those wishing to major or minor in geology; those pursuing a teaching career in earth science.

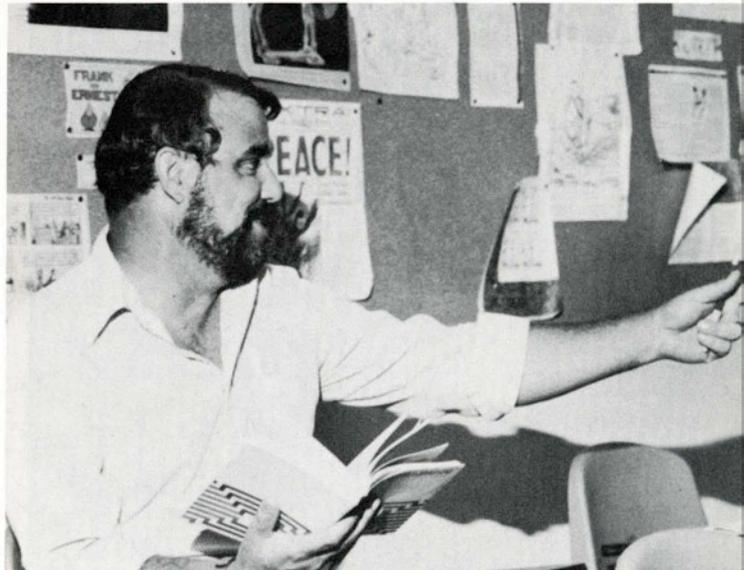

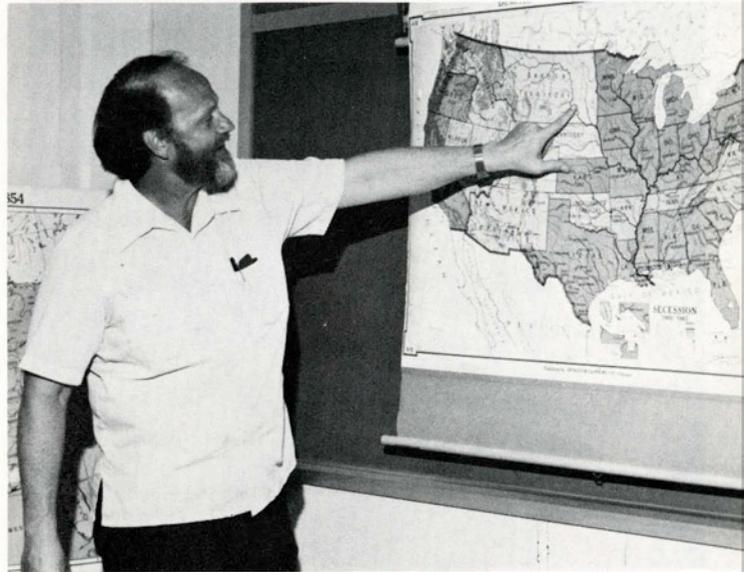

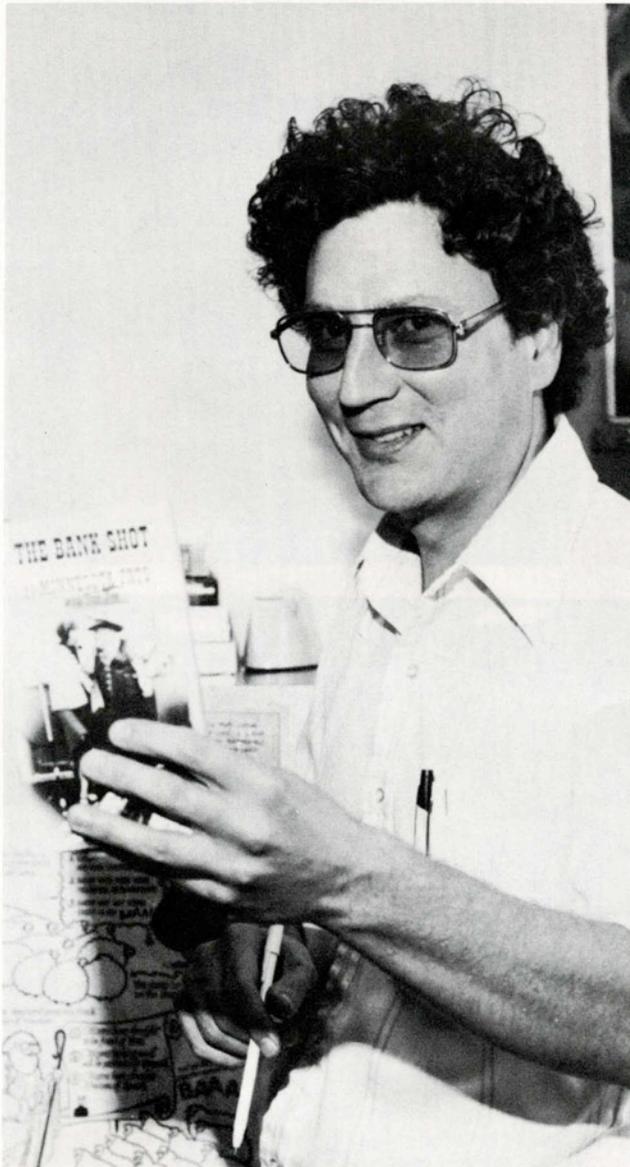

Department Of History

Second floor Rhode Hall is the location of the History Department at Texas A&I. The History Department offers a great many quality courses from military to Civil War, economic to Texas, American to European studies. By state law a student is required to complete six hours of history before receiving a Bachelors degree. This requirement along with the many students who enjoy history keep the Department busy and well occupied every semester of the year.

All students majoring in music will at the same time be given the opportunity of establishing a broad background in liberal arts so that undergraduate training will promote not only professional competency but also intellectual maturity.

The Physics Department serves the needs of three types of students — the major-minor student, the technical or pre-professional student, and the student who takes physics as an elective or to satisfy his science requirements. For physics majors or minors the aims of the Department are to (1) prepare students for graduate work, (2) offer a well-balanced graduate physics program through the Master's degree, (3) prepare students to compete with graduates from other institutions for industrial and/or governmental positions, and (4) prepare those students wishing to go into the teaching field.

Engineering can be defined as the profession in which knowledge of the mathematical and natural sciences gained by study, experience and practice is applied with judgement and responsibility to develop ways to utilize economically, the materials and forces of nature for the benefit of mankind. Former U.S. Secretary of Labor, Hodgson, placed this definition in perspective when he said, "Engineering has always served man and has done so spectacularly well. When man wanted roads and railroads, engineering provided them. When man needed production in massive quantity, engineers built machines and automated them. When man sought new conquests in space, engineers gave him the moon and stars. We will continue to want these things but apparently we now want something more, often nebulously described as quality of life. And as the case of past wants, engineering can help provide it."

The engineer uses the laws of nature to construct new systems, services and devices to meet the needs of society. The common thread that runs through engineering is design of the organization of the man-made world to serve the needs of society.

In spite of the ups and downs in the economy of the country there is usually a wide variety of positions available for engineers in industry. Design, development and production engineering jobs in the iron and steel, petroleum and chemical, automotive and power industries are examples. Graduate engineers are required each year in industries related to consumer products, such as foods, cleaning materials, home appliances, radio, television and other electronic products.

Graduates with engineering degrees have enjoyed the highest starting salaries of any graduates of four-year college programs.

The aim of graduate work at Texas A&I University is to give opportunity for further study in chosen fields. Such study should lead to greater breadth, but especially to greater depth of knowledge in the field selected. Emphasis is placed on how to find knowledge, how to evaluate it, how to organize and express it, and how to apply it.

The Graduate College provides information for students and faculty concerning its policies, programs, and admission requirements. This information serves only as current minimal guidelines for graduate study. Each college specifies its own criteria for academic excellence.

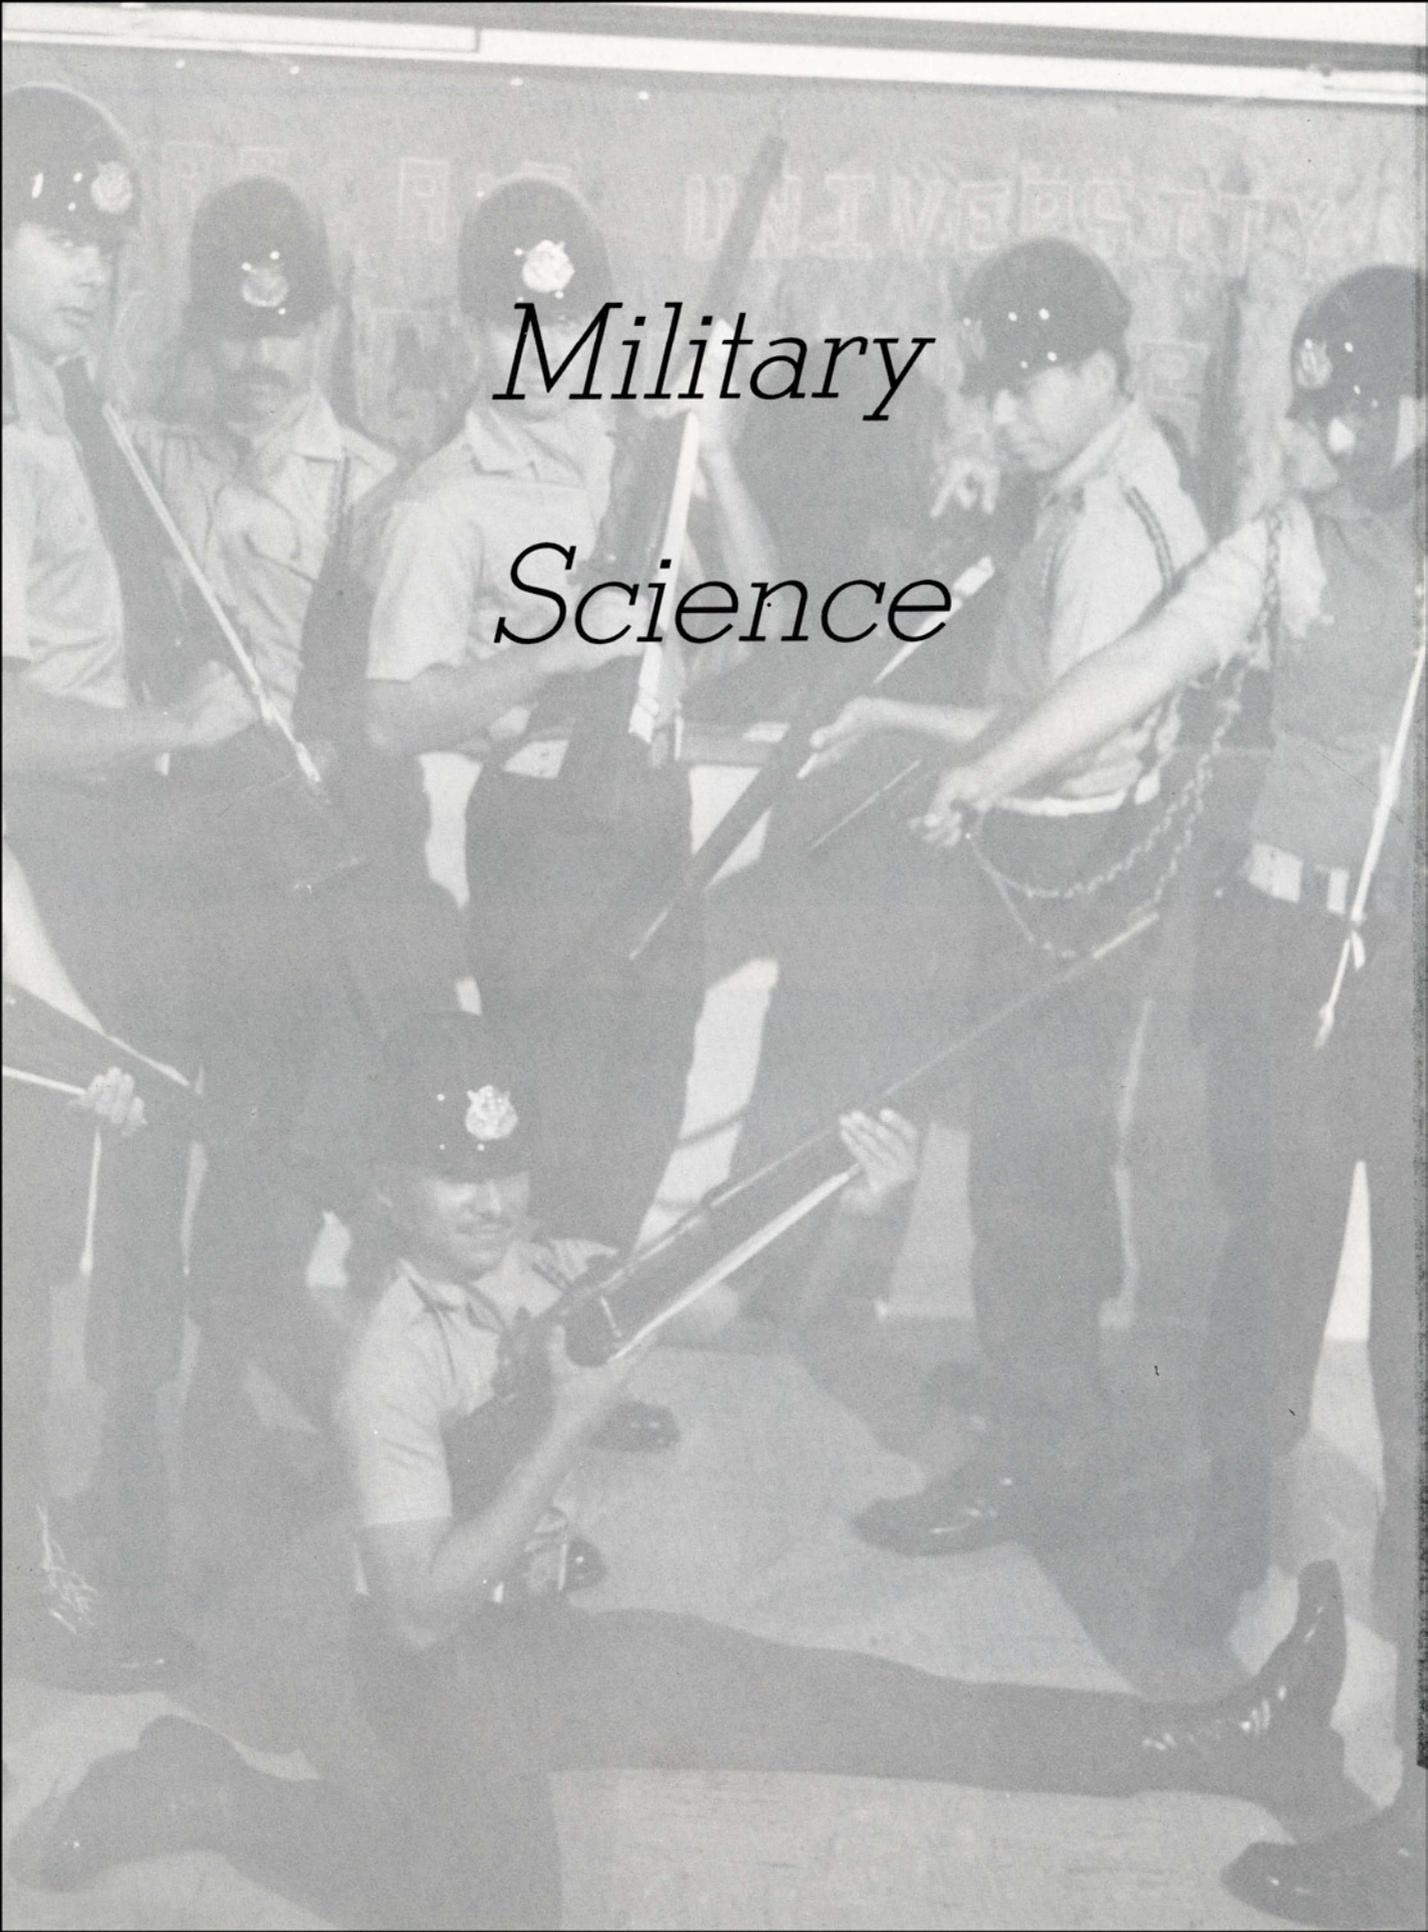

The primary objective of graduate study is to develop in the student habits of independent scholarship. The quality of work expected from a graduate student must include an extensive knowledge of the chosen major and its related areas. The student should anticipate lengthy reading assignments, term papers, laboratory work, frequent use of the library and other research facilities, and attendance at workshops and conferences.

College is a time of high promise and even greater expectations.

Students eagerly look forward to the day when they will have completed their education and are ready to get on with a career in their particular field.

However, many will not be ready.

In these highly competitive times, young people quite often find that a college education is simply not enough. An important ingredient is missing.

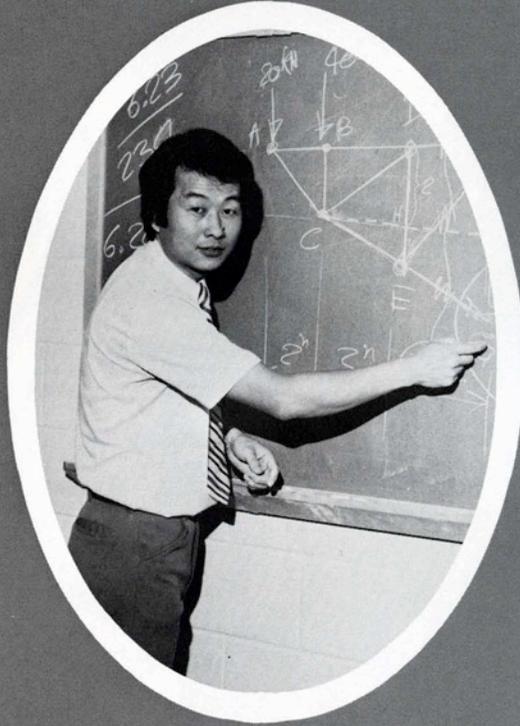

Employers look for training in the human relationships of management and in the exercise of responsibility. Another name for this is leadership.

Today, more and more companies are finding this quality they prefer in the young men and women they employ who are Army ROTC graduates.

ROTC classes are unique in the college curriculum in offering instruction and a practical, working knowledge of leadership. What the college student learns in Army ROTC training is directly applicable to a civilian career: the principles of personnel management, a ready acceptance of responsibility, the desire to achieve, personal confidence and general business practice.

There is a difference in the college graduate who has had the benefit of Army ROTC. That difference makes his worth more to a prospective employer.

Dear Student:

The 1981-82 academic year at Texas A&I University has been one of intense activity. Perhaps each member of the university community would single out something different as being truly memorable about this year. The diversity of activities that occur on a university campus help to characterize college life and play a key role in the learning experience which we value so highly.

The El Rancho staff have worked hard to assure that this volume of the year-book captures those things in which the students, faculty, and staff of our university take pride. If they have been successful, you can pull the 1981-1982 El Rancho off the shelf next year, or even on the eve of the twenty-first century, and say "That's A&I, my University."

May the future hold for you an exciting balance of challenges and opportunities.

Sincerely,

Sports

Gil Steinke's record as a coach is among the nation's all-time best. He had a very impressive record of 182-61-4. His football teams have won a total of six national championships. He coached a team that during the mid-1970's won thirty-nine games and three national championships in a row, the second longest winning streak in collegiate history.

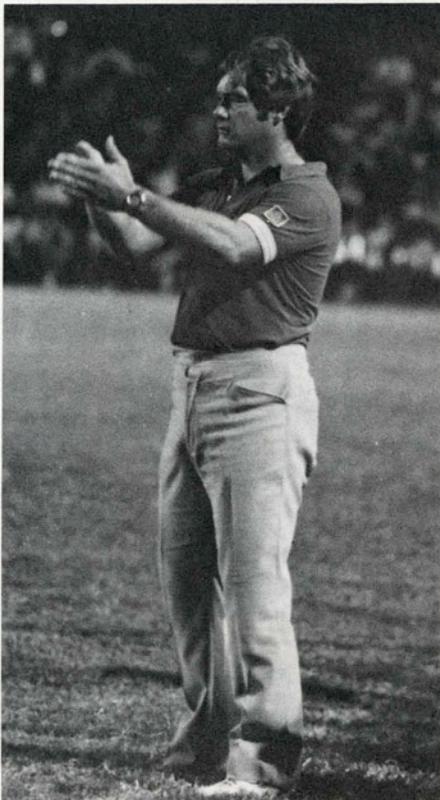

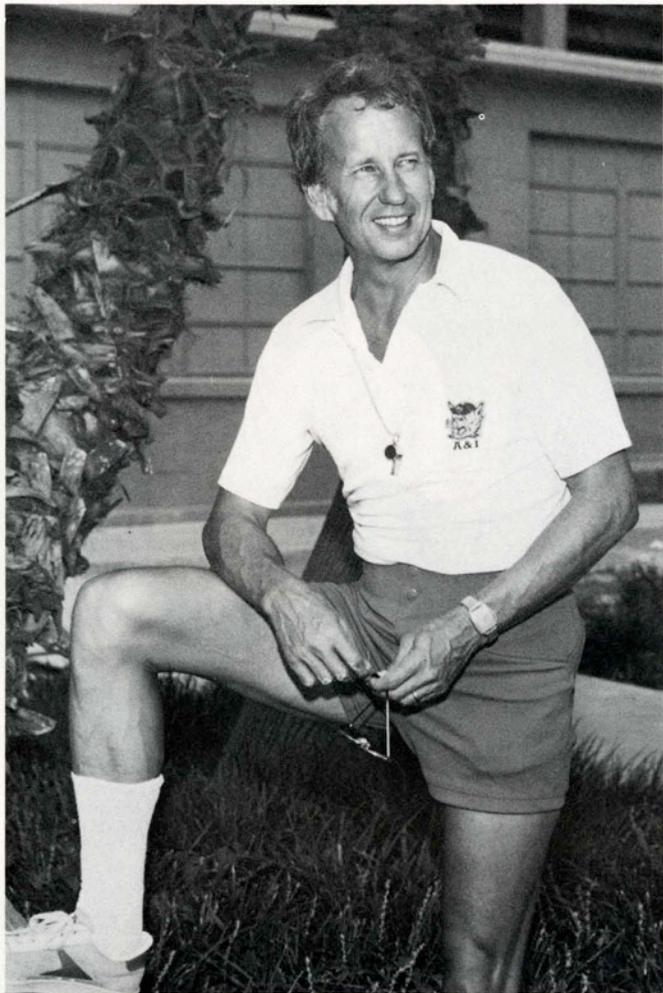

Steinke has also received state as well as national recognition. He was named NAIA national coach of the year four times, and also LSC coach of the decade for the 1960's and 1970's. He is in the NAIA, Texas Sports, and Texas A&I Athletic Halls of Fame.

Steinke has served as Athletic Director at Texas A&I since the spring of 1954 and will retire on August 31, 1982 as Athletic Director.

Gil Steinke has played a very important part in making Texas A&I athletics what they are today. We feel honored in having had Steinke as a part of our university. In honor of his many accomplishments we would like to dedicate the sports section to him.

Editor's Note

This yearbook has been a part of me since I was elected as Editor in May of 1981. Although my job seemed never-ending, I finally handed in my last deadline on June 23, 1982. I'm glad it's over, but I enjoyed working as your Editor. I can honestly say, though, that I had a lot of help in completing this annual.

Dr. Steinmeyer, Student Publications Advisor, helped push me along until I was finished. John Penry, Josten's/American Yearbook Company Representative, taught me some new procedures. Other people helped me get through the "headaches" that came with this job. The rest of the book was completed with the help of the people we photographed. Without you, there would be no material to work with.

Michelle D. Cislip
